A Cégep Heritage College professor receives an honourable mention from the Association québécoise de pédagogie collégiale

Madame Marie Déziel, professor at Cégep Heritage College, Anglophone Cégep in the Outaouais, received a Mention d'honneur from the Association québécoise de pédagogie collégiale (AQPC) at the APCQ's annual symposium banquet held on June 9th in Lévis, Quebec. The APCQ award honoured her commitment and contribution to language training.

The AQCP's mentions d'honneur allow Québec colleges to recognize the pedagogical commitment of faculty members who contribute to the evolution of education by the quality of their work.

Marie Déziel

Madame Déziel was nominated by her peers. She is coordinator of the Modern Languages program at Cégep Heritage College, and has been teaching French and Spanish at the College since 1987.

"Madame Déziel is devoted to students experiencing difficulties. In 2010, she developed a pedagogically effective exercise book that facilitates learning. She mentors trainees and facilitates the integration of new professors by helping them adapt to their new environment. What's more, a talented musician, she has contributed to the College's musical entertainment for a long time. We are proud of Madame Déziel's important contribution and commitment to the quality of education at Cégep Heritage College" indicates Michael Randall, Academic Dean.
